Lille Rode

The creation of singer/songwriter and former actress

Anna Mountford, sounding something like Wolf Alice meets Chappell Roan.

Having starred in Lloyd Webber's Starlight Express in her teens, Mountford went on to become a regular fixture on British tv in shows like Holby City, Silent Witness, The Giblet Boys and Jack of Hearts. She began writing songs in 2010 following a career move to LA as a way to voice her reaction to living and working in Hollywood. Upon her return to the UK in 2015 her track Meteorite was included in a Glastonbury Emerging Talent Competition playlist. Most recently her song Run Away was featured on BBC Introducing in the West.

"In an era defined by political chaos, toxic social dynamics, and systemic misogyny, Lille Rode isn't just observing the madness—she's hunting it".

Playing on fairy tale origins, the name is Danish for "Little Red". The songs flirt with the radical notion of slaying metaphorical wolves. The music serves as an unflinching post-mortem of career-spanning trauma, dissecting heavy personal and societal themes with a razor-sharp edge.

Musically and lyrically, Lille Rode strikes a rare, compelling balance. Serving up deep, cinematic darkness side-by-side with a defiant, satirical wit; the sonic equivalent of a winky face emoji sent from the edge of the abyss.

Stuart Patrick with a varied musical history ranging from orchestral work to original rock bands, Stu has now settled into his groove as an experienced rhythm and lead guitarist, influenced by the likes of James Honeyman -Scott, Mark Knopfler and David Gilmour.

Tim Leyshon got his first drum kit aged 14 and formed his first band with older school mates playing a mix of original rock and roll covers. After Uni he played in an 11 piece soul band playing soul/blues covers inspired by The Commitments. He later discovered his love of original music! Tim has since played funk and Americana with several festival circuit regulars.

“I am now with your band Anna and I’m lovin it!! Especially the new song you played us whilst waiting for storm to pass” !!

And introducing our newest member Simon Povey whose musical journey began when he picked up his dad's Eko bass at 19 years old. That’s when his lifelong love affair with the bass guitar began and he’s never looked back.

Since the early ‘90s, Simon has played in a wide range of cover and function bands, performing everywhere from local venues to festivals.

Today, he’s excited to be part of a new musical adventure with Anna.

“Her fantastic original songs are pushing me in new creative directions, giving me the opportunity to express myself in ways I haven't before. It's a refreshing challenge and one I'm thoroughly enjoying. The future looks exciting”.

Lille Røde is a regular on the local music circuit playing gigs and festivals across the South West.
