

Lille Rode Bio

Lille Røde, Danish for Little Red, has featured on BBC Introducing in the West with her track Run Away.

The creation of singer/songwriter and former actress Anna Mountford and sounding something like St Vincent meets Tori Amos.

Having Starred in Lloyd Webber's Starlight Express in her teens, Mountford went on to become a regular fixture on British tv in shows like Holby City and Jack of Hearts. She began writing songs in 2010 following a career move to LA as a way to voice her reaction to living and working in Hollywood. A creative attempt to retain her sanity. Upon her return to the UK in 2015 her track Meteorite was included in a Glastonbury Emerging Talent Competition playlist.

"In response to a growing epidemic of mismanaged politics, misguided social interaction and misogyny, Lille Rode's songs flirt with the notion of slaying those metaphorical wolves. A post mortem for a career's worth of trauma examined and served up with a dose of dark humour and a winky face emoji ;)"

Lille Røde is a regular on the local music circuit playing gigs and festivals across the South West.

Mountford is currently developing a screenplay and is an acting coach and mentor working with young actors in the local area.
